TO THE PEOPLE OF SCOTLAND.

DEVELOP-CENTREMENT.—Again the important duty follows upon us to call upon you to become your own promoters, and to enter upon the path of self-education, that another enlightenment, and energetic effort may be made to liberate yourselves from the power of class tyranny, class legislation, and domestic oppression.

Do you want an incentive to exert you to this? Look at your degraded country. Look to your suffering who are rearing for slavery by your apathy. The cause of the misery of your country and your offspring is class legislation.

You are an enlightened people; yet are you politically enslaved. You are ingenious and industrious; yet thousands of you are deprived of the necessities of life—Why? Because it is the interest of those who legislate for you that your abundant political faculties should be kept in the power to reveal in the fruits of your industry and ingenuity.

Every thing which has added value and wealth to our country has almost exclusively emanated from the working classes, and yet these classes are not recognised as men in the body politic. Nay, they are scorned and trampled upon by those to whose pleasure and prodigality their industry and industry is made subservient.

We are aware that you will acknowledge the truth of these observations; but more than this mere acknowledgment is necessary. We must have your persevering assistance. We must have your pecuniary and moral aid. We must have the benefit of your co-operation in all the efforts and exertions which we are making to the support of the agitation for the Charter which we have in view.

Let no one keep back from joining us from the idea that his assistance will do no good. That one with his efforts and exertions will do more good than a hundred who do nothing. The great goal is a combination of parties; the mighty ocean a concentration of drops. Units make thousands. Forward then, one by one, till the united strength of our country is ranged on the side of freedom.

Let no one hold back with the idea that he can do more good in a local or sectional, than in a national concentrated capacity. There must be a national bond of brotherhood, a national union of principle, of purpose, and of policy. And of policy, in order to have this strength there must be a union of sections. There is a national union of your part; or you will fail. You are strong and united in the north; you are strong and united in the south; you are strong and united in the west; and your strength carried on with a rectitude becoming men labouring in the holy cause of universal freedom, will ultimately prevail.

He that is not with us is against us. The man who opposes this Union, or keeps aloof from it, is adding to the misery of the people, and is in a more abject position than the one we are now placed in.

In order to have a wide-spread public opinion in our favour, talented individuals are to be obtained. The expected visit of Mr. O'Connor will be an immense good to our cause. But we must have others whose route we can chalk out, and who know the working of the present system, and who know the wrongs suffered by the unfranchised. Such individuals would be of immense value to the cause of liberty, by affixing such an Organization as would cause us to assume the position we lately held.

Parties wishing to enter into co-operation of means for the purpose of bringing lecturers from England to assist the domestic energies of our people, are requested to send an intimation to the Committee, Messrs. William Brown, No. 30, John-street, Bridge-end, Glasgow.

rise on Sunday morning in a fit state of mind for the celebration of the Lord's day, if they were married on the previous day! Of course the Hortlanders, who care very little about a due celebration of the Sunday, and on the contrary make it the merriest of the week, are crying out that the governing party was going to introduce among them "the English Sunday," than which they know nothing more formidable.

tions have taken place, and a little more or less to our advantage. The day that will see it brought to a close, if in favour of this republic, will indeed be glorious. Of the strike, we are now in the second day, and the strikers are not so starved out as they are as the enemy imagine; neither were our troops so frightened by the appearance of their great force, nor of death by starvation or the sword.

to the boat, refusing to speak to any one whom they may happen to pass. Should it be a man, they pull to sea like madmen, very seldom exchanging a single word with each other, until the lines are laid, when most frequently the general cry should be "hold on the state of the weather. If it be calm they are afraid they will have to pull the way to the harbor; if it blows, they are afraid of a storm; if they see the least appearance of fish, they are afraid of too many, if otherwise, they declare there will be none; and should a dog-fish stray within their lines, they become extremely alarmed, and fly to their lives with fury; so they are in continual fear and perplexity from the moment they go to sea until they land. Should it happen, as it frequently does, that the haddock keep without their prescribed limits, they attribute their want of success to ill luck, and not unfrequently to the wretched and cunning cantrips of some old wife in town whom they may have seen, and who they suppose is ministering in while they are in the act of hauling their lines, not a single hook more would be baited that day. I know there are exceptions, of even whole towns, who do not follow these barbarous customs. They gradually, and as they proceed seaward; but I know the majority of the fishermen along the shore are totally incapable of conducting the fishery on an extended scale.

The Bench said the witnesses for both sides must leave. Mr. Roberts said, he had no witnesses at present in the Court. Mr. Ackerley wished to know who the witnesses were whom Mr. R. intended to call.

Mr. Roberts said he should give the names of the witnesses whom he intended to call, inasmuch as it might furnish his opponent with a clue to the line he intended to adopt. It was not imperative for him to give the names of the witnesses; it was sufficient to know that they were not in Court.

Mr. Roberts returned the compliment. The Mayor said Mr. Roberts should be turned out of Court, and made a similar reply. The magnanimous threat was not, however, attempted to be carried into execution.

The two witnesses for the prosecution then retired, and Mr. Ackerley resumed.—The further observations made by the prisoner to Mr. Green, showed that he was connected with the Colliers' Union. Mr. Green asked him who had told him he was not to work, and he replied, "They all said so."

Mr. Ackerley and the bench looked dumfounded at Mr. Roberts' interruption, and said he must make his objection at the proper time. Mr. Roberts said he would not have interrupted the examination, but he was convinced that the objection he had to urge would totally do away with the charge, and that he was not to be troubled with it.

Mr. Roberts said, the 24th section stated the extent of the agreement, and that it was not to be shown that borrowed money came within those exceptions. The agreement was entered into by a bygone debt. There was nothing said as to what the debt was for, or how contracted.
